Editor of The Times-Dispatch:
Sir, I wish you would put your shoulder to the wheel in behalf of the proposed Carnegle Library. I can superithe to the Tabard Inn or the Booklovers' Library, and by paying from three to ten dollars a year, get as many books as I want, or I can from time to time buy books and add to my own Ubrary, but that does not make me indifferent to the needs of people of very moderate means, who cannot afford to do this, and to whom the city ought to offer every opportunity for reading and improvement.

It seems to me that we are a little uncivilized in Richmond, not to have a public library, and I hope you will stir our city fathers up to a proper realization of the public demand for the small appropriation needed to enable us to avail ourselves of Mr. Carnegle's offer.

We spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on the education of the children in this community; cannot we, as a city, strain a point and spend a few thousand dollars annually for the education, improvement and rational enjoyment of the "grown-ups," as well as the children? I'm no demagogue, but I do think we owe this much to the so-called working classes.
